

Protection against dust during the production and processing of titanium dioxide

In Germany the „general dust limit value“ of 1.25 mg/m³ at the workplace applies to the production and processing of titanium dioxide.

Similar dust limit values are also defined in other European countries, but there is no harmonised European limit value.

At which points in the manufacturing process does dust occur and how are employees protected from it?

